Maxwell and Landgraf paid the penalty of their awful crimes, by hanging, at St. Louis, last Friday. At an early hour in the morning Maxwell gave to the press an "Address to the people of England," in which after alluding to the "great boasts made by the American people in regard to the fair and just way in which they treat all people," he calls attention to the "unjust and unfair way in which he has been treated," and says that the "prosecution resorted to every unfair means in their power, even to crime itself." The Governor Friday morning received a telegram from British Minister West requesting a stay of the execution for Maxwell, but the Governor was inexorable. At 8.47 the Sherifi read the death warrants. Both men ascended the scafold without assistance and at 8.56 the drop fell. Landgraf was pronounced dead in eleven and a half minutes. Maxwell's struggle continued for fourteen minutes, when he was pronounced dead.

The leap of a daring aeronaut from cloudiand to Rockaway Beach, N. Y., attracted 5,000 people to that resort Wednesday afternoon. The venturesome balloonist who gave the exhibition was Prof. W. W. McEwen, of Jackson Mich. Prof. McEwen had previously made 163 balloon ascensions, but his parachute decension, Wednesday, was only the third venture of the kind he has undertaken. According to the programme he had to jump 6,000 feet, but everything depended on the atmospheric condition and the altitude to which the balloon would rise. The balloon was inflated with hot air or smoke produced by an ordinary wood fire and the ascension was made shortly before six o'clock, McEwen, in red tights, hanging by one hand to the big vessel as it sped akyward with considerable velocity. For two minutes the balloon continued to rise very rapidly; then it seemed to stand still, as if waiting for the critical moment. Pulling in the lower end of the parachute, the upper end of which was attached to the top of the balloon by a slender cord, the zeronaut grasped the Pulling in the lower end of the parachute, the upper end of which was attached to the top of the balloon by a slender cord, the aeronaut grasped the tron ring of it with one hand. The additional weight of his body broke the parachute which is sixteen feet in diameter, in a few seconds it opened very gracefully and filled with air, letting the aeronaut and pleasantly through the air and "landing" him in a swampy part of the bay with the gentleness that would hardly have jarred the nerves of a kitten. The descent was made in two and a half minutes.

Hay loading machines are coming into use in the west, and are doing a satisfactory work. They load from the window or swath, take it as clean as an ordinary pitcher, and are capable of putting on a ton and a half load in eight to ten minutes.

Walter F. Brown says that a young man who intends to be a farmer and has no farm of his own, will do better to spend a few years in learning the practical part of the work than in college. There is nothing that will contribute so much to success on a farm as plenty of manure. Talk of commercial fertilizers as we may, it takes the barn manures to make the farm and farmer rich, and time and labor can well be put into it. well be put into it.

A correspondent of the Country Gentleman suggests as a means of interesting the boys and girls in the farm and its surroundings, that a children's department be set apart at the county fairs where the boys can compete separately in animals and products of their own raising, and girls the same with products of the garden and household. The idea is a good one. Give the boys and girls something to do if you the boys and girls something to do if you

A recent New York despatch states that the recent sudden changes in the West Deer Is weather have had the effect of developing Asparagus pleuro-pneumonia to an alarming extent and should hamong cattle in and about the city. In Westchester County over 200 head of cattle suffering from the disease have been ordered to be killed by the authorities. The A bed of it is value of the cattle is placed at $10,000. Eighty cows have-been destroyed at Bilss-ville, and a large number have been isolated at the West Sixtieth street stock yard, this city, and will be destoyed.

Though the stock of cheese in New York State is not above the average in quantity, yet in Canada it is understood that the factories are full, that June cheese is not all sold, and that the accumulation of stock in the country is much larger than usual. Such condition of things is by no means favorable to the continuance of a strong market. And the news from England is also of a discouraging nature. Farmers there are looking forward to poor crops as a result of bad weather, and are economizing on their purchases.

Experiments at the Pennsylvania Agricultural Experiment Station, Prof. Armsby, director, on the digestibility of corn fodder, that is, the stalks of field corn after the ears are removed, showed that taking the whole growth, ears and all, the stalks alone contained thirty-seven per cent. of the total digestible matter. The practical meaning of this is that the farmer who grows a field of corn, husks it on the hill, and lets the stalks go to waste, leaves over grows a field of corn, husks it on the bill, and lets the stalks go to waste, leaves over thirty-seven per cent. of the food value of his crop in the field, and contents himself with only sixty-three per cent. of its whole value.

Prof. Sanborn, in a late Micror and Farmer, thinks that the character of pasture lands is an important influence on raising beef steers, and that the poor New England pastures stand in the way of growing the best high grade stock here. Our very poor hillside pastures are profitable for only forests. Good pastures he considers the corner stone to the most successful type of farming. To overcome the powerty of New England pastures he recommends chemical fertilization, yard manuring, feeding stock at pastures, and alternating between fields and pastures. Beyond this he advises a rotation of crops include have all arable land in pasture from one to three years in rotation. Even then the summer feeding of good steers should be a prominent reliance.
